MOTHER LOVE.

No love like the love of a mother When trials are gathering fast— Though fond is the care of a brother, Sometimes it will fail at the last. Should you turn from the pathway of duty,

A sister's affection may fade;
But mother-love shows its best beauty
When her child to sin is betrayed.

A father may speak stern and coldly
If his son has wandered astray;
But mother will stand forward boldly And help him regain the lost way,
And speak to him kindly, in warning.
With just as tender a tone
As she did in childhood's pure morning

Ere sorrow and crime he had known. Ah, no! there's no love like a mother's So noble, forgiving and true; We may trust to many another's

And value it, that 't is new, To find, when life's sun is shrouded, And our pathway enters the glo Their love for us, too, will be clouded, While hers follows us to the tomb.
